City Offered Aid by Southwestern

Power Company Pledges Emergency Help—But
Is Unnecessary.

An offer of assistance in case the local municipal power plant needed either temporary "juice" or parts for its machinery during the repair of the dynamo which was burned more than a week ago, was offered the City of Hope yesterday by the Southwestern Gas & Electric Co., but was refused as entirely unnecessary.

The offer was extended by Edwin W. Vennard, general commercial manager of the company, with offices at Shreveport, Mr. Vennard, who spent yesterday here, said his company stood ready at any time to place a temporary line from its nearest circuit at the city's disposal.

Progress is being made on the re-winding of the largest of the municipal plant's generators, and it will be back in service shortly. The city's smaller generator has stood up successfully under the continuous load forced on it by the accident.

Three Persons May Have Been Killed In Crash.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 7.—(P)— Continuing a 12-day search, two automobiles were en route today to a canyon high in the San Bernardino mountains above Lake Arrowhead where the wreckage of a Western Air Express plane and bodies of the crew were sighted yesterday by Miss Juan-to Burnes and Dudley Steele, aviators.

The plane, piloted by James S.
Dole and carrying a co-pilot A. W.
Briber, and Steward John W. Slaton, has been the object of an extensive search since it was lost in a storm after leaving Kingman, Ariz., on the morning of February 23 en route to Los Angeles.

A nominating committee of three past presidents was chosen by Pres-eon meeting of Hope Rotary club in

This year's nominating committee, announced today, is comprised of:

Jewell.

The principal speech at today's luncheon was delivered by Mr. Robison, who described the birthday party given for Rotary International by the St. Louis Rotary club, which he attended on a recent visit in that city.

Secretary Carter Johnson of the local club read an invitation from Governor Purnell asking Hope to send as many delegates as possible to the Southern Development Congress which convenes at Little Rock March 10-11-12.

Guests at today's luncheon were:

Parole of Cook Given Approval

Parole May Take Effect
Saturday, Says
Report.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP)—The parole of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, serving in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas, for using the mails to defraud, has been approved by Attorney General Mitchell. It was announced today by the department of justice.

Authorities here could not ascertain when the parole would take effect, but word from the Warden of the prison said it would probably be tomorrow.

Cook also carries a fine of $12,000,
which if it is not paid by March 2, 1935, he will be forced to serve twelve months for the fine, or may escape it by taking a pauper's oath.

Cook began serving his term in 1926 after an appeal had failed. While waiting for the appeal he served 14 months in jail, and was allowed no credit for the sentence.

Hospital Merger Asked By Cannon Is Given Refusal

City-County Association Hears It At Annual Meeting

TOO BIG A PROJECT
Association Says $25,000
Investment Requires
12 Years' Pay

The consolidation proposal of Dr.
G. E. Cannon, calling for the sale of his Josephine Hospital at a price of approximately $40,000 in order to merge it with Julia Chester Hospital, was today rejected by the Hope and Hempstead County Hospital association, operators of the Julia Chester institution.

Consideration of Dr. Cannon's suggestion came before the association at its annual meeting today in the city hall, with President C. W. Welt-man presiding, and a large attendance.

The consolidation project was rejected, according to association speakers, because it represented more money than a public group could safely underwrite. It was explained that the association selected a $25,000 building on newly acquired land on South Main street as the largest possible project it could ask the city government to finance, and expect to repay the city in the next ten or twelve years.

It was contended by association executives that to undertake a $40,000 project would make it impossible for the present operators of Julia Chester Hospital to "see daylight" on the obligation which would eventually fall back on them from loans extended to them by the city.

Dr. Cannon's proposal was made to the association "in the interest of a unified hospital project," and he said that he was offering property with an appraised value of $60,000 for $20,000 less.

DEQUEEN, March 7.—With 17 bids received, Otto Yenglin, of Texarkana was awarded the contract for 40 blocks disclosed, it was learned that it would be about $130,000.

Work on the paving project will begin in 30 days, and is expected to be finished by July 1. The $145,000 bond issue of the city has been approved by a bonding company.

The commissioners who selected the contractor were W. F. Thomas, Roy Williamson and R. G. Huskins.

The Public And Page One

Life is all skittles and beer for the average newspaper man, with but few disappointments to bear in the course of a career devoted to pencil and paper, no matter how long that career may have lasted. He may never have the perfect story—to use a homely phrase, may never have "set the woods afire" with his rhetoric and logic nor have attained unto the rank of political king in his bailiwick, but if he keeps the faith—is steadfastly loyal to his "sheet"—and to the honor of newspaper men be it said they are loyal to a degree but seldom found in other lines of endeavor—there's a meed of satisfaction at the end of the road—a knowledge that but few troubles have beset him.

But what we started out to discuss was the perennial, peripatetic publicity promoter. He'll come charging into the sanctum, lay his copy on the desk and unhesitatingly demand "page one" for pure-dee advertising matter. If he gets it, he won't have to buy advertising space. That is when the editor tears his few remaining locks and uses language not tolerated in the best circles.

A demand that a certain bit of alleged "news" be given front page space is proof positive, to the average editor, that it is publicity and not worth space at all! Folks seem to forget that page one is only a part of the paper. There are many other pages—usually one designed to carry such piffle as presented—and if all the copy for which page one space is asked were printed, that page would be as broad as a boulevard and as long as a turnpike and there'd be no other pages in the paper.

And when the stuff doesn't get preferred position with headlines all out of proportion to its worth—"which ain't any," as Florian Slappey would say—the paper gets cussed because it can't peer through each individual microscope and see things as others do.

Wherefore, the editor laments—but goes cheerfully on his way saying "nay, nay," and trying to give his readers a real newspaper with a minimum of "promotion" which won't pay salaries nor grocery bills.—El Dorado News.

Courts and "Technicalities"

By dismissing without comment an appeal in a prohibition case, the Supreme Court of the United States frowned on a attempt to upset a verdict on the ground of a technical fault in an indictment. The law under which the appellant had been convicted at Kansas City forbids the sale of liquor "for beverage purposes." The indictment under which he was tried charged him with the sale of liquor "fit for beverage purposes." His lawyers contended that he had been wrongfully convicted, since the indictment did not state directly that the liquor sold was to be used as a beverage, but only that it was usable for that purpose. Two federal courts sustained the indictment before the case reached the Supreme Court. Now the final word has been spoken, and to laymen it will seem a most sensible word.

American courts have been criticized for tendency to make a sort of intricate game out of judicial procedure by laying too great stress on technicalities. A classical case was furnished some years ago by Missouri. In that state a murder verdict was set aside on appeal because the word "the" had been omitted at a certain place in the indictment. Or perhaps a "the" too many had been inserted. We forget which, and it is unimportant.

England swept all such legal rubbish away long ago when she gave her system of criminal procedure a complete overhauling. In English courts today, if a technical fault is found in an indictment it is corrected by order of the court, even during a trial. Not only that, but by order of the court indictments may be amended to bring into line with facts that have been established since they were originally drawn and presented to the court.—Arkansas Gazette.

Unsung Heroines

The trained nurse is one of those people who seldom get from the general public the amount of appreciation that they deserve. We take her for granted; it is only when something exceptional happens that we realize how well she serves us.

A few days ago there was a bad hospital fire in Providence. The news dispatches next day had a familiar ring—all of the patients were rescued, due chiefly to the heroism and cool-headedness of the nurses.

That happens continually. At the dreadful Cleveland Clinic disaster the nurses performed amazing acts of bravery and devotion, many of them sacrificing their lives. Nurses never fail us in such times; but we never stop to give them the recognition they deserve until some spectacular tragedy forces the matter on our attention.

Poultry Day—A New Era

THE week's news gives every encouragement to the new farm development which will be launched in Hempstead county Saturday—Poultry day.

Cotton dropped sharply in the trading centers. A larger surplus than at any time since 1925, combined with poor industrial conditions around the mills both in the United States and England, is steadily forcing the price down. Buyers will have cotton for the asking next fall. The Federal Farm Board has warned Southern farmers to plant better cotton and less of it—but true relief has never been found in telling the farmer what not to do.

The only hope for Southern agriculture is to develop new sources of revenue which will compete with cotton for the farmer's interest. The good farmers will develop these lines, automatically planting less cotton; and the bad farmers will come to it out of sheer exhaustion from battling a one-crop system. The idea is not new. It is being preached all over the South today, by bankers, economists, and business men whose personal prosperity depends on the prosperity of this entire section.

So Poultry day comes to us—here in Hempstead county—as something much more valuable than the Farm Board's warning against cotton. Through poultry and dairying there is a way out.

The puzzle for the average farmer is the behavior of the prices of farm commodities. This is the key to much of the trouble with land prices and farm operations today, and if the farmer doesn't always understand it, he isn't to be blamed—few townsmen understand it either.

It is a problem of markets. As we have repeatedly written in this column, there are only two ways of raising the net income of the farm and the value of farmlands—either by developing greater industrial markets here in Arkansas, or by specializing in foodstuffs aimed to be sold in the established markets of the East and North.

The farmer has a certain control over his destiny when growing feedstuffs—but he can't control cotton. Should an army of cotton textile mills be set up in Hope tomorrow night, we doubt whether the cotton farmers of Hempstead county would profit one penny. But the truck growers, poultry fanciers, and dairymen, would get rich.

Textile mills buy their cotton anywhere in the world.

Hempstead county farmers would have to meet a given price—and although within a few miles of the mill, likely as not would be undersold half the time by cotton from India or Egypt.

But the families of a mill colony—they are a new industrial market. They can't buy tomatoes and cantaloupes and butter and eggs and milk just anywhere. They must buy these things close at hand. That's where the feedstuff farmer comes in.

We once saw this industrial phenomenon actually take place. We saw El Dorado jump from a village of 3,800 to a city of 30,000. What happened to the Union county farmers living around El Dorado? When we first went to that city in 1923 the restaurants were serving condensed milk with the coffee, and cold-storage eggs and chickens. Three years later, in 1926, the highways out of El Dorado were dotted with chicken farms, and there were enough new dairymen to organize a county dairy association. But we presume Union county grows less cotton than she did twenty years ago. Through all this miracle of change in the feedstuffs market, nothing was happening to the world cotton market—and nothing will happen, unless a war comes along.

Here in Hempstead county we are strategically located for year-round production of poultry that will sell at advantageous prices in Kansas City and St. Louis. Only a few weeks ago The Star published the story of M. L. Nelson, Blevins merchant who shipped a carload of live Hempstead chickens all the way to New York. Our editorial entitled "Poultry on the Hoof," was widely copied. But what we wrote was true—poultry in its larger aspects offers a revival of the old spirit of the West when the cow-puncher took his herd of steers a thousand miles to market.

People still live in the great cities who want beefsteaks, milk-fed chickens and eggs and milk—and there are millions more today than when the first romantic cow-puncher carried his bellying herd across the plains to the little cities and the limited markets of his own day.

And Hempstead county, if she follows up the movement to be launched this Saturday, will see poultry moving to market in trainloads; for this is a destiny which the farmer holds in his own hands—giving his markets the things which they want and will pay for, regardless of tradition or labor.—W.

WASHINGTON—The super-patriotic societies with headquarters in Washington, which haven't been very happy since President Hoover demanded an investigation of William B. Shearer and since Secretary of State Stimson allowed Count Karolyi to enter the country, have often been attacked for their tendency to exaggerate the menace of Communism and Socialism.

In the past their favorite sport has been to paint frightening pictures of "red webs" in which the attempt was made to link Moscow with various liberal organizations. But times change and there seem to be worse bogies pressing upon us. One may turn, for instance, to the list of legislative policies recently adopted by the Sentinels of the Republic, one of the most militant super-patriotic groups.

The Reds in Congress

The Sentinels, apparently forgetting Moscow for the moment, have about decided that the most dangerous enemies of our glorious institutions are to be found at the White House and in the halls of Congress. The doughy Sentinels, in short, have turned their muskets on about every piece of progressive and humanitarian legislation proposed or passed in recent years.

On general principles, the Sentinels oppose any attempt to revive the Child Labor amendment and any uniform divorce amendment to the Constitution, or any amendment invading "the rights now reserved to the states and to the people." Specifically, they then take issue with President Hoover and the government. They would abolish the Children's Bureau, the Women's Bureau, the Home Economics Bureau and the Bureau of Vocational Education, as "useless or moral." All these bureaus are now part of the government and seldom receive any criticism except for loud cheers. The object of them is, generally, to help people and improve the standards of living.

"We oppose the further appropriation of funds from the federal treasury in aid of educational projects in the several states. We oppose the Brand bill appropriating $100,000,000 annually to states contributing equal amounts, for the purpose of co-operating with the states in payment of salaries and other expenses of elementary schools in rural areas.

"We oppose other so-called 'child welfare' measures. We oppose all so-called '50' or 'federal aid' legislation by which the federal government would assume control of the states in their purely internal affairs.

"We oppose the proposed establishment of a Federal Department of General Welfare. We oppose federal aid or participation in old-age pension schemes, purely local health projects and labor-safety measures."

REAL FACTS!

Regarding the Purchase of Tires for Your Car or Truck.
Read All This—We Believe You Are Interested

Much has been written lately regarding prices, values and guarantees on pneumatic tires for cars and trucks. Some of these statements if true, would have you believe that recently a Merchandise "Santy Clause," had appeared in our home town. Most of these statements deviate so far from the true local condition, that we are unable to let them stand unchallenged. We are going to outline our position in the local tire retail market.

The HOPE AUTO COMPANY is a carload buyer of Firestone tires and tubes, all made by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, and bearing their name and serial numbers.

By large purchases we are able to earn all volume and cash discounts. These facts, coupled with out direct from Firestone contract enables us to own tires at the lowest market prices.

We do not have an overhead expense directly chargeable to our Tire Department. This department being operated in connection with another department of sales. Hence extremely low retail selling cost.

We are old and seasoned in the tire business, and this department is cared for by men who know your needs and local tire conditions. We are able to tell you what size and type tire will render you best service for your driving conditions. We are able to talk tire intelligently, and always glad to do so. We are interested in your, your car, and your tires.

We maintain the largest stock of Firestone tires and tubes in this section. Our stock is complete in all sizes and types for all cars. Our large stock turnover enables us to always have fresh stock on hand. Our facilities for properly stocking, displaying, mounting and servicing are modern and complete.

Our guarantee is the same on all types Firestone tires. A guarantee of perfection for the entire life of the tire. Your guarantee of satisfaction, you are the Judge.

All Firestone tires are now built with the new High Speed, gum dipped carcass, and new tread designs, using 18% more volume of pure tread stock, rendering 35% more service than the same tire built less than one year ago.

We have a credit plan of selling one tire or five, to meet the needs of all customers. This plan is very liberal and will enable everyone to re-tire correctly. Too, we are often able to make allowances on your old tires to apply on purchase price of new.

We do not expect to ask you more than you would pay elsewhere for the same tire, and get your business. Our prices are strictly competitive, as are listed elsewhere in this paper.

Review all the above low cost, low selling expense, Firestone accepted quality, terms to suit you, guarantee of satisfaction, Hope Auto Company ability to serve—come in and see the completeness of our line, get the price on your size and type, talk tires with us.

We think you too will be happy to find a progressive, home concern where you may buy your tires at a real saving over all competitors.

Let us put some hours of every day for holy things—whether it be when dawn peers through the window pane, or when the moon flames like a burnished topaz, in the vault, or when the thrush pours in the ear of eve its plaintive melody—some little hour. From sordidness and self a sanctuary, swept by the winnowing of unseen wings, and touched by the White, Light Wonderful.

Yesterday marked the 34th anniversary of the organization of the Pat Cleburne Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. This chapter has the distinction of being the first chapter organized in the west of the Mississippi river. In 1896 to the organization of the Pat Cleburne Chapter, the writer always feels that it is fitting to mention the name of Mrs. C. A. Forney-Smith, who is rightly called the "mother of U. D. C. in the state of Arkansas." was the first president of the Pat Cleburne chapter. Yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John S. Gibson, Sr., with Misses Maggie Bell, Mamie Carrigan and Mesdames Lagrone and McWilliams associate hostesses, the chapter celebrated the 34th anniversary, with an appropriate program, as follows: Mrs. R. T. White read a paper giving items of interest in the life of Pat Cleburne. Miss Almand, of the Hope High School faculty favored the meeting with a reading. Mrs. Geo. Spragins read a paper of unusual interest, entitled, "What the Pat Cleburne Chapter has meant to Me." Mrs. R. T. White presided over a short business period, and during the social hour, the hostesses served an attractive sandwich and ice course, with decorated angel food cakes bearing red tapers.

Mrs. T. R. King entertained at a perfectly appointed luncheon yesterday at her home on East Avenue B. The dining room was bright and attractive with a profusion of spring flowers, and a most tempting five course luncheon was served on small tables, with St. Patrick colors being observed in the place cards, nut cups and lighted tapers. Guests enjoying this hospitality with Mrs. King and her daughter, Mrs. Clell Dildy, were Mrs. H. H. Stuart, Mrs. C. C. Spragins, Mrs. Harry Dabbs, Mrs. J. F. Gorin and Mrs. J. A. Henry.

Open for Business Poultry Day, Saturday, March 8th.

ANNOUNCING--- A Central Poultry Market for Hope

Hayes Quality Feeds

We will sell this well known brand of feeds for Poultry, Cows, Horses, Mules.

Many Hempstead county farmers have used this famous brand. It brings greater profits from poultry—balanced to suit our Southern climate and conditions. None better.

You are cordially invited to visit this new place of business on our opening day—Saturday.

We will pay highest market prices for eggs and poultry, the year round. We will ship these produce items in carload quantities, to the market centers that will pay the highest prices for them. This will enable us to offer higher prices than when no direct poultry shipping market is available.

We believe the poultry business has grown to the extent that such a poultry market is needed—that we can buy enough eggs and poultry to ship in carload quantities—and pay the farmer higher prices for his product.

That is why we say: "Let's raise more poultry in Hempstead County, and in all Southwest Arkansas."

Why Notre Dame Wins

It perplexes you might have seen why Notre Dame wins so many football games in the fall. You could be cleared up if you could see the boys on the campus down at South Bend in the springtime. The first peep of the sun coming back north finds hundreds of them sunbathing, football, and they look like kids who go for marbles. More than 500 students play football annually at Notre Dame. They are the teams, dormitory teams, "A" teams and "B" teams. You can make some kind of football team at Notre Dame. It is not how terrible you are, but why there is no intra-mural athletic problem at Notre Dame and why the first teams are always good.

Saving Strength

The system of training is an intelligent use of effort that always leaves plenty of power in reserve. In the spring there is an emphasis on the game schedule, but the training is not too strenuous. Blocking, tackling and other fundamentals of the game are taught. Spring is the time for the hard work. When the men come back in the fall they are versed in the essentials of the game, which are blocking and tackling.

When they return in the fall, says Tom Lieb, who coached the team during the absence of Knute Rockne last season, "they know what they are supposed to do. They are in physical condition and ready to start offensive plays."

For three weeks in the fall, there is a review of the fundamentals, with blocking, tackling and running to get them into condition. They have to be able to take hits and give them.

After the team has one regular game under its belt, select groups of "firsts" does no scrimmaging during the week. Their hard work between games is over. If they are hurt at Notre Dame, they are hurt in a game, and not during practice.

"We want the first team to be rested and in good mental and physical condition," says Lieb. "They have to be able to go and to hard on Saturday afternoons."

"Two of the teams we played last fall had their whole life scrimmaged out of them every day during the week before we met them. They didn't have the stamina and were slow on their feet."

It's Pretty Soft

DURING the season, on the Monday and Tuesday following the game, the players get together and review the formations that had been used against them. They study the formations of the team they are to play on the following Saturday. While the selected 15 firsts stand by and watch, a team using the other fellows' formations plays the second and third varsity teams.

"Then we spend about 15 or 20 minutes on our own plays," says Lieb. "The first team men are never on the field more than an hour and a half a day, but the second and third teams get plenty of toil."

The idea is to keep that first team fresh for Saturday. And it is.

Valuable Awards for Dairy Cattle

1930 Southwest Arkansas Fair Offers Best Prizes In Its History.

Recognizing the importance of developing the dairy industry in this section of the state, the management of the Southwest Arkansas Fair has completely revised the premium list for the dairy cattle department and is offering premiums on the various classes that compare favorably with the premiums offered by many of the state fairs.

There are many good dairy cows in this section of Arkansas but heretofore the premiums in this department have not been large enough to encourage a large exhibit. With a more attractive premium list, the dairy cattle department should be one of the feature attractions at the Fair this fall.

The following tentative premium list has been announced by the premium list committee:

	1st	2nd
Jersey cattle:
Bull, two years old and over	$20	$10
Bull, one year old and under	20	10
Two years	20	10
Bull calf	10	5

County Judge John L. Wilson has announced that the county will co-operate with the Fair management to the extent of paying the premiums in the Dairy Cattle Department. This co-operation on the part of the county should result in the best dairy show ever seen in this section of the state.

Attractive cash premiums will also be offered on all other classes of livestock including the leading breeds of Hogs, horses and mules.

M SYSTEM STORES

LOCALLY OWNED AND OPERATED

To Correct False Propaganda

To correct the erroneous opinion held by some of the people of Hempstead county, we wish to inform the public that the "M" System Store of Hope, is individually owned and operated by J. M. Stripling & Son, and has no connection with any "Foreign Chain Organization" in any sense of the word.

In opening our cash and carry store, we realized the necessity of having an arrangement of fixtures for your convenience and display purposes, so we decided on the "M" design, and bought the fixtures and equipment from the manufacturers, the same as you would buy house furnishings or anything else, and proceeded with our business on good honest principles.

The statement of ownership can be verified by the tax record of Hempstead county, which will show you this store is individually owned by us.

The different "M" System store owner throughout the country, do some cooperative buying, although "individually owned", which assist these stores in making attractive prices, and none of the money saved in that connection goes to anyone, except our customers, through prices, and ourselves.

By reason of a systematic way of doing business, some co-operative buying, quick turn over, and small profits, buying the majority of our merchandise from local jobbers, thereby saving long truck hauls, we are able to compete with the "foreign owned chain stores", and save many hundreds of dollars for the customers of these stores.

If in doubt where we buy the majority of our merchandise, we refer you to the local jobbers, or to anyone else in Hope vicinity, that has anything to sell in our line, and see if we don't buy as much from local people as anyone else in the city.

Our "M" store is strictly "locally owned and operated, and we believe it our duty to patronize local industry and local people to the fullest extent."

HEALTHY LOT OF CHILDREN

Every Member of the Family Took Black-Draught When Out of Sorts.

Walnut Ridge, Ark.—"Until I was a grown girl, I did not know there was any other purgative but Theodor's Black-Draught," writes Mrs. J. C. Harkness, of this place. "My father gave it to every member of his family."

"Whenever we got out of sorts, we got down the Black-Draught box, made a tea of Black-Draught, and gave it to us this way for indigestion and constipation."

"There were eight of us children in our family. We were a healthy lot. Black-Draught was about our only medicine."

"I have continued to use it off and on in my home as I have needed it since I have been married. I give it a good recommendation, for I know from my own use Black-Draught is a good medicine."

"Theodor's Black-Draught is a purely vegetable cathartic or laxative medicine, composed of selected medicinal herbs and roots. Black-Draught is finely powdered, which enables the juices of the stomach to extract its medicinal properties in a natural way."

Murder Backstairs

©1930 by NEA SERVICE INC. BY ANNE AUSTIN AUTHOR OF "THE AVENGING PARROT" "THE BLACK PIGEON," ETC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

THE CRIME: Doris Matthews, lady's maid, murdered Friday night in a summerhouse by blow on the head with heavy perfume flask; body dumped into lake on estate of millionaire Berkeley.

DIRECTIVES: Honorable Dundee, guest at time of crime and discoverer of body at sunrise swimming party; Captain Strawn of the homicide squad.

MEMBERS OF HOUSEHOLD: Mrs. George Berkeley, social climber; George Berkeley, engaged to Strawn; observed by Dundee stealing out of the house Friday night, sent to bed.

Gigs Berkeley, who unaccountably sprinkled all guests Friday night from back of perfume presented by Strawn to her mother.

Dick Berkeley, drank Friday night; intoxicated with beer; forced her to agree to meet him later that night.

Wickett, butler, formerly in employ of both Mrs. Lanham and Strawn.

Eugene Arnold, chauffeur, engaged to Doris.

Clorinda and Dick are first suspects. Dick is still missing from his room. While coroner and fingerprint experts are at work over body, Captain Strawn summons Wickett for questioning.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER X

WITH unhesitating dignity the butler obeyed Captain Strawn's summons, but halted just before setting foot on the first of the two steps leading from the cement walk into the little summerhouse, his sad eyes involuntarily flinching away from further sight of the slim, rigid body laid out on the bench.

Strawn and Dundee descended the steps together. Strawn spoke, his voice curt but not unkind:

"Wickett, does young Berkeley drive his own car?"

The butler appeared startled. "Why, yes, sir. There are four cars, sir. The family limousine, Miss Clorinda's coupe, Mr. Dick's sports car—a two-passenger, that is; and the service truck."

"Thanks. Come here, Payne!" Strawn called to one of the group of uniformed policemen and plainclothes detectives awaiting orders a short distance away on the lawn. "Dash down to the garage and check up on the cars you find there. Should be four. I particularly want to know if a two-passenger sports car is missing."

"Get along Payne, and make it snappy!" Strawn ordered. "Now, Wickett, before I go into the house and notify the family that murder's been committed out here, I want you to answer a few questions. . . First, do you know anything at all about this bad business?"

"No, sir," the butler answered, after the faintest hesitation.

"Any suspicions, Wickett?" Strawn pounced.

"I—no, sir!"

"WICKETT!" Dundee interrupted. "I've already told Captain Strawn that you, as well as I, overheard Mr. Dick Berkeley urging Doris to meet him outside last night, after the family were in bed. You know, Wickett, that I am Mr. Dick's guest here, his friend, but at a time like this, everything we know must be told. I am sure you want to see poor little Doris avenged, and as speedily as possible."

"That I do, sir!" the butler agreed huskily. "I did overhear, quite by accident, the conversation you refer to, and I thought it my duty to speak to Doris when Mr. Dick had left her. It was in the back hall, sir," he explained to Strawn. "The poor child assured me she had no intention of keeping her promise to Mr. Dick. She said she had already arranged to meet Arnold for a stroll around the lake."

"Arnold, the chauffeur?" Strawn interrupted sharply.

"Yes, sir. They are—Doris and Arnold were engaged to be married, sir; had become engaged a few days ago," the butler explained. "I might add that we were all very much pleased, sir."

"Well! A new suspect and a new motive!" Strawn ejaculated. "Jealousy, eh?" and he raised his eyebrows triumphantly at Dundee.

The butler coughed deprecatingly. "If you'll pardon me, sir. . . Thank you, sir. . . The chauffeur and the limousine were required at about 11, sir, to drive Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Smith, Mrs. Berkeley's brother and sister-in-law, to their home in Westview."

"Westview, eh?" Strawn frowned. "That's about 15 miles from Hillcrest, Dundee. . . Did you hear Arnold return, Wickett?"

"No, sir," the butler answered readily. "But I feel sure he did not make an effort to see Doris."

"Why?" Strawn snapped.

"Because, sir, when he brought the car around to the front door I admitted him, and he asked me to give Doris a note, in which, as he told me, he had explained why he could not meet her last night. I intended to hand her the note, but my duties kept me constantly downstairs, and I placed it on a little table in the back hall. I knew she would find it there on her way to meet Arnold, if I did not have an opportunity to give it to her before."

"And you left the note there?"

"Yes, sir. In fact, sir, I am ashamed to confess that I forgot about it. It had been a heavy day, preparing for the big party which was planned for tonight."

"WELL, Wickett, get along with your story!" Strawn commanded, impatiently. "Did you see the girl again? After she told you she wasn't going to meet young Berkeley, I mean?"

"No, sir. She said she was going up to her room, to write to her sister in England, about her engagement to Arnold, sir. She also said that Mrs. Berkeley had told her it was not necessary for her to wait up for either herself or Miss Clorinda."

"Did Mrs. Berkeley know of the date Doris had with Arnold?" Strawn asked.

"No, sir!" Doris remarked that she hoped Mrs. Berkeley would not find it out," the butler answered.

"Why?" Strawn shot at him.

The butler flushed slightly and his eyelids flickered, but he did not answer.

"How did Mrs. Berkeley and Doris hit it off? Not so good, eh?" Strawn probed.

"Doris was an excellent lady's maid, sir—sweet-tempered and efficient," Wickett answered, that husky note of grief in his voice again.

"But Mrs. Berkeley—not so sweet-tempered, eh, Wickett?" Strawn dug at him relentlessly.

"It—you'll—pardon me, sir—" Wickett pleaded.

"I guess I'm answered," Strawn concluded, with satisfaction. "All right, now: what about the note? You forgot about it last night, you said. Did you see it this morning?"

"No, sir. It was not on the little table where I had left it."

"Then Doris must have found it on her way out to meet Arnold, eh?" Strawn deduced, glancing toward Dundee.

"But if she found the note, calling the date off, I'm wondering why she left the house at all," Dundee objected.

"That's easy!" Strawn laughed drily. "With Arnold safely out of the way, she could keep her promise to meet Dick Berkeley!"

"No, sir!" Wickett spoke with a positiveness startling in contrast with his former respectful mildness. "Not Doris, sir! She was not that sort of girl!"

"Perhaps you don't know, Wickett, that Dick Berkeley sneaked out of the house last night to keep that date with Doris, and is still missing. Or did you see him go out?"

"No, sir," the butler answered, but for an instant there was in his eyes that same black rage with which he had looked at Dick Berkeley the night before.

At that moment Detective Payne came loping up, breathless, apologetic. "All four cars in the garage, sir. Sorry to be so long, but I had to go to the house and get the keys from the chauffeur. And say, chief, that guy, Arnold, is in an awful stew. Tried to get me to tell him what's up, but I kept my mouth shut. It seemed to give him an awful jolt when he saw that the sports car was sitting pretty—"

"All right, Payne!" Strawn interrupted. "Take three of the boys and scour the estate for Dick Berkeley—a young man in dinner clothes. Any place he could hide that you know of, Wickett?"

"There are several buildings on the estate, including a gardener's cottage which is not in use now, and Miss Gigs's little playhouse—also not often in use now, sir," Wickett answered.

"All right, Payne! Hop to it! Search everything, even if you have to bust down doors," Strawn ordered. "And you, Wickett, you can go to the house and get along with the family's breakfast, but don't serve it until I give you the word. And don't talk—understand?" he cautioned sternly.

As the butler moved away with mournful dignity, Strawn commented: "There's one guy would like to jerk the rope himself if Dick Berkeley killed the girl. . . Well, Doc, what's the verdict?" he asked, as he and Dundee re-entered the summerhouse, where Dr. Price, the coroner, was awaiting them, willing away the time by watching Carraway, fingerprint expert, at his work. "Death by a blow on the head or by drowning? And when did she die?"

In filming the picture Harry Beaumont planned to make the night celebration scenes with the beach city fireworks display in the background. A city ordinance, however, banned the use of fireworks on the national holiday.

A week later Beaumont obtained $1,500 worth of pyrotechnical displays and staged a Fourth of July all his own at the M-G-M studio.

Menu For the Family

BY SISTER MARY
NRA Service Writer

DURING Lent, when meat is off the menu occasionally through the week, the cook must look for other sources of protein.

Although some protein food is necessary to maintain a balanced diet, meat is only one of the growth-promoting and muscle-building foods. There are at least five other groups which, if properly used, are the equivalents of meat in nutrition and general excellence. Eggs, milk and milk products, fish, nuts—particularly peanuts—legumes, and macaroni and spaghetti made from durum wheat are the sources of protein that are at every woman's hand.

It should be kept in mind when planning meatless meals for children that the protein of dried peas, beans and lentils is of a poor quality and plenty of milk must be supplied.

Eggs and fish are ideal for children's meals, for they are easily digested and furnish "complete" proteins in abundance. Eggs are a concentrated food to the highest degree, because there is absolutely no bulk in the way of connecting tissue. Although they contain many substances the body needs for its development, meals in which eggs figure as the main course must be carefully planned.

A Perfect Combination
Milk and fresh vegetables combine with eggs to make a perfect meal. Milk supplies the lime lacking in eggs, and fresh vegetables furnish bulk as well as their vitamin and mineral content.

Much has been learned in the last few years about the vitamin content of eggs and they come under the list of protective foods, along with cod liver oil, spinach and orange juice.

Properly cooked eggs are easily digested and can be served to an

Poached Eggs With Tomatoes

Two cups canned tomatoes, 1 sweet green pepper, 4 rounds of toast, 4 eggs, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper in boiling water for five minutes. Dip in cold water and rub off this outer coating. Remove seeds and white pith and cut flesh in shreds. Combine with tomatoes and simmer until thick. Pour onto a hot platter and arrange rounds of toast on the tomato. On each piece of toast put a poached egg. Melt butter and cook until slightly brown. Add lemon juice slowly and bring to the boiling point. Pour over eggs, sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve at once.

entire family from the two-year-old up. Poached eggs, eggs soft cooked in the shell, eggs hard cooked in the shell, carefully scrambled eggs, baked omelets and shirred eggs are excellent ways of cooking eggs for children. A rich sauce can be served separately to adults if the eggs alone are too bland. Hollandaise sauce poured over a poached egg on a split and toasted English muffin results in "eggs Benedict," a delicious and smart dish.

Mushrooms combine appetizingly with eggs. Anchovy paste and sardines add piquancy and interest to the mildly flavored egg.

Poached eggs are good with creamed vegetables on toast. This makes an excellent two-in-one main dish. Creamed celery, spinach, asparagus or tomatoes are especially appealing.

Manning are the other players. "A Single Man" was adapted for the screen by F. Hugh Herbert and George O'Hara from the original play written by Hubert Henry Davies.

National Census To Start April 2

Army of 100,000 Men and Women Will Count U. S. Population.

On April 2, next, an army of one hundred thousand men and women will go into sections at the call of their government.

It will be an army of peace and public service. It will march, not in file and company, but as individuals in the stupendous task of decennial stocktaking, known as the national census.

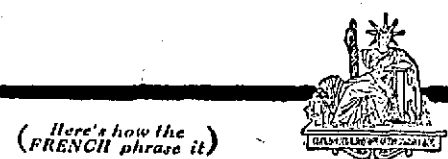

In scope, organization, equipment and responsibility, this will be the greatest undertaking of its kind ever launched in this or any other country. This important enterprise will be conducted by the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. In one month the enumerators must complete their part of the work and accumulate a vast amount of data regarding social and economic conditions throughout our far-flung areas. In one month these men and women must gather this information from every state and hamlet, six million farms, 14,000 mines and quarries, 100,000 irrigation and drainage projects, and from nearly 200,000 factories, more than two million stores, and nearly thirty million households.

The work of the census has expanded immensely with the social and industrial growth of the nation. Our inventory must now include 48 states, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Guam, Samoa, Virgin Islands and the Panama Canal Zone.

Kink David, some 3,000 years ago, conducted the first authentic census. He numbered the people of Israel and Judah. For nine months and twenty days his agents worked and reported 1,300,000 "valiant men" of the sword.

Now we face the problem, not of counting men of the sword, but of securing comprehensive information regarding 120,000,000 of our fellow Americans. It will be necessary to enumerate and collect data from these 120,000,000 people as to sex, age, nativity, occupation, value of homes, and many other points.

In the various branches of the census, it will be necessary to ask nearly 20,000 questions regarding individuals, farms and manufacturing and commercial enterprises. At the beginning of April next, there must be in the hands of the enumerators at least 40 million printed copies of various schedules of inquiries.

The decennial census is mandatory under the constitution. The first was taken in 1790. But the originators of that mandate probably never dreamed either of the rapid increase in our national population, or of the complex development of our national life.

Today the welfare of our people rests upon business—upon our farms, our factories and counting houses, and homes. Statistics may be dull in certain aspects, but statistics must be reliably gathered and intelligently compiled if the progress of the nation is to be wisely charted.

The attitude of all classes toward major questions of public policy is largely based upon statistical information. The business men themselves want the facts most, but all classes are materially affected thereby.
